CBC Members;

I respectfully request the Congressional Black Caucus to lead Black Americans to form exclusive legal firms to submit petitions of practical directive systems to their most trusted court for processing the reordering of their constituent government jurisdictions.

White Americans need to know exactly how Black people would organize just government without the interference of white people intimidating the timid, yet brilliant, Black people who are inherently more just than the evil white devils.

The American legends about justice that have been devised to lead us to believe that true justice is possible, cannot be achieved under the direction of the 18th century three-part model, and the subsequent disordered expansion of security departments and improper reapportioning of faulty representation. The exercise of the 1787 federal Constitution successfully lead to the end of slavery in America, and that was about all it was good for. The design of the government is inherently flawed, and cannot meet the demands of diversity that the nation has evolved to, nor the expectations of a relatively more sophisticated citizenry than the people of the 18th century.

Please be advised that there is no conflict of interest for government employees to support the reordering process and remain faithful to the subsisting charter system. There is only a conflict of interest when the government employee is exploiting the inadequacies of the subsisting system to hide their corruption of the public's trust. It is an absurd argument to exploit the irrelevant oath of office to delay the reordering for better government and more efficient service of justice. This is all proven by the existence of legislative and executive committees commissioned to consider government reform.

I am available for two three-hour public consultation hearings upon request of the United States Senate or House of Representatives.

Sincerely,

Ronald J. Martin
