Mr. LeBron James;

You are a very impressive high school graduate, Mr. James. I am an unimpressive community college art school drop-out, yet I am very confident that I have the solution to all of the problems that hinder the approach to world peace. I cannot speak as well as you, nor can I claim to be an honorable person, as you have proven to be. My social record is atrocious, but I proudly declare that I have the tangible solution to the most complex social problem that possess the soul of Black American Culture.

The United States government was inadequately designed, and it was established in the adversity of compromise with racist white slave owners. The founders did not have the technology, nor sophisticated manpower to organize the social justice system correctly. Subsequent generations did not have the proper technology to correct it, either; and since the dawn of American global dominance, world leaders have been searching for the successor to the erroneous United States Constitution that works by way of compromising and trading favors, rather than the dialectic graduation of sound reasoning that our sophisticated senses lead us to believe would be more appropriate. The Nobel Peace Prize was awarded to Nelson Mandela and Barack Obama in anticipation that they could deliver the better system.

The solution is the organization of an official constitutional convention that gathers the diversity of people that the founders, and subsequent generations, could not gather. The diversity of people, including black people, will need to be available to participate at the fabled table in cooperative ambition to generate a plan to reorganize the government into a reliable social justice system, and deliberate the civil responsibility issues – national conversation when black people will get to tell white people what they needs to do.

The next time you have the opportunity to exercise your leadership and platform, please convey my request that (black) people organize legal firms (delegations to the convention) to reorder the three levels of government, and submit their proposals in the courts that they feel confident that they can process their charter proposals to serviceability.

Sincerely,
